The Signature of Consciousness

How Thoughts Influence Water Structures This motto reflects exactly the principle that is also used to interpret tear crystals. If our conscious contents co-shape reality, then ...

How Thoughts Influence Water Structures

This motto reflects exactly the principle that is also used to interpret tear crystals. If our conscious contents co-shape reality, then positive thoughts/euphoria could actually have an order-creating effect on the microscopic structure of tear fluid, while negative thoughts have a destructive or chaotic effect. Warnke points out that quantum physics has shown how much the experimental result depends on the observer, and draws the conclusion: "Everything that happens at the subatomic level happens under the influence of consciousness."

This is a powerful statement that essentially claims that without consciousness there is no definitive physical result - which implies that our mental attitude shapes matter.

Water - particularly the purest possible - is an excellent medium for detecting your emotional state. Just as a pH indicator shows how acidic or basic a liquid is, electron microscopy reveals your emotional state based on the water clusters that form in your vicinity. Using the simple experimental setup with two glasses of cooked rice, which we have referenced multiple times in this channel, any child can make both their own existence as a spiritual force and their positive, ordering force of a positive state of mind visible. And depending on individual choice, also chaos. It's best if you find something you can admire - admiration is a very powerful, ordering force to be truu.

It's good.