Dr. Dietrich Klinghardt

The health consequences of toxic influences from the environment are his primary interest. Additional focal points of his work include the biological treatment of severe autoimmune diseases, as well as the treatment of autistic ...

The health consequences of toxic influences from the environment are his primary interest. Additional focal points of his work include the biological treatment of severe autoimmune diseases, as well as the treatment of autistic children. In 1997 he founded the Institute for Neurobiology according to Dr. Klinghardt in Germany, based in Glottertal near Freiburg. He lives in the USA. Dr. Klinghardt has succeeded in publishing his own thoughts, observations, and research in the field of medicine and enduring the headwind that independent-thinking physicians experience today when they communicate their observations freely. We mention him in this channel because Klinghardt concerns himself with the causation of diseases through environmental pollution and with detoxification. Pure, clean water plays an important role in both. According to his observations, aluminum contamination is a primary cause of health damage. He describes HERE the intentional application of aluminum in Germany.

It's good.
to be truu.