There are scientists who straightforwardly publish their scientific findings .

There are scientists who straightforwardly publish their scientific findings and there are those who fear personal disadvantages through the influence of industry and therefore withhold their findings ...

There are scientists who straightforwardly publish their scientific findings and there are those who fear personal disadvantages through the influence of industry and therefore withhold their findings or, in exchange for personal advantages, even publish the opposite. Sports scientist Ingo Froböse (65) from the German Sport University Cologne belongs to those who would probably escape a purgatory for researchers after the Last Judgment. Contrary to a million-dollar marketing campaign by the mineral water industry that sells people minerals in water as a "valuable," "healthy" food, Prof. Froböse has consistently and decidedly made clear for years the following fundamental, scientifically established findings about the elixir of life that is water:

It's good.
to be truu.