many in this channel are, based on personal experience, virtually unshakeable in their conviction of these statements:

Pure water is good. Structured water is better. Cell-available water is the foundation of true health.

An explanation based solely on word of mouth of the remarkable physical and mental benefits that can come about through regular consumption of "cell-available water" is sometimes difficult. Personal feeling and personal experience therefore remain the safest path for everyone who wants to experience the effects of cell-available water themselves.

Nevertheless, we would like to make a promising announcement about a study: We were able to research a current study that explains the scientific background for why cell-available water feels so much better for humans - and from a biological perspective also represents the best water for supplying the body.

The study shows, among other things, why cell-available water is not just about the transport of nutrients and waste substances into and out of cells and tissue - but about much more...

For the unshakeably convinced: Look forward to scientific tailwind - coming soon on this truulInfoChannel

We recommend to all others: Attend a lecture in or and learn what nobody tells you about water - and why you should know it. You can find dates here

It's good.
