Prof. Dr. Bernd-Helmut Kröplin (1944 - 2019) was, alongside Prof. Dr. Geral

Prof. Dr. Bernd-Helmut Kröplin (1944 - 2019) was, alongside Prof. Dr. Gerald H. Pollack, one of the world's most renowned water researchers. He provided thousands of proofs that human consciousness changes matter and ...

Prof. Dr. Bernd-Helmut Kröplin (1944 - 2019) was, alongside Prof. Dr. Gerald H. Pollack, one of the world's most renowned water researchers. He provided thousands of proofs that human consciousness changes matter and water stores information. - Findings that are only allowed to be "true" in military laboratories, unless one wants to be "framed" as an esotericist with the intention of eliminating one's reputation. Kröplin greatly advanced the "Emoto method" in water photography. Here is his quote from his website:

"Each water type has its own image pattern, which depends on the water's contents and history. External influences can overlay these patterns, particularly inputs into the water such as electromagnetic or acoustic waves directed at the water. As far as the patterns we observed are concerned, we have found that water has a certain type of memory and the ability to store information related to what the water has experienced. Through our experiments, we were also able to recognize that living organisms such as plants can 'read' this information and respond to this information in the water in a regular manner."

With his evidence, Kröplin opened up an entirely new dimension with seemingly immeasurable consequences for the existing scientific worldview and even for some religious philosophies. He made discoveries on a scale that would have quickly landed pioneering thinkers of the past in prison, while their gravestones were only adorned with laurel wreaths decades later. In an effort to make his knowledge public with less hostility, Prof. Kröplin attempted, with the help of artists and the exhibition www.weltimtropfen.de, to make his discoveries socially acceptable. His findings were brilliant, but in the attempt to awaken as few "enemies" as possible, his world-changing knowledge never became a "threat" to the establishment.

-> We recommend everyone to conduct a simple experiment, in which everyone can demonstrate to themselves and their children(!) at home the influence of their feelings and thoughts on the environment. (for the experiment description:) -> For those interested in scientific information on this topic, the findings of biologist Dr. Ulrich Warnke on quantum physics under the topic: "Quantum Philosophy and Spirituality" on Youtube are to be recommended.

It's good.
to be truu.