What could damage look like that is favored by drinking mineral water, while the consumption of purest water is avoided?

Cardiovascular diseases, cancer and so-called diseases of civilization are officially the leading causes of death in Germany. Many scientists, such as the renowned health consultant Dr. Bragg, have been pointing out for years that inorganic minerals, as they occur in water, particularly in mineral water, can "petrify" arteries and make them brittle.

Tiny capillaries must remain absolutely flexible even after 80 years, given approximately 100,000 heart muscle movements per day. From birth, the human body is continuously supplied with inorganic chemicals that it continuously wants to get rid of. Purest water helps it do this best.

Consumers really shouldn't care which side scientists are being paid from for their study results, because after all we're only talking about water here. You don't need a "yodeling diploma" to try out the effects of highly pure water on yourself in a self-experiment. In German-speaking areas, you can even conduct this experiment for free for a week. If you want to try it right away with highly pure and particularly cell-accessible (cell-available) water, you can find a description and the necessary contact information here .

It's good.
